

SINCE TAKING PERUNA

I can say my bowels are much more regular. My heart is stronger. My appetite is much better. My throat is much better.

Mrs. William H. Hinchliffe, 20 Myrtle St., Beverly, Mass., writes: "I have taken four bottles of Peruna, and I can say that it has done me a great deal of good for catarrh of the head and throat. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh. I do not think I ever felt much better. I am really surprised at the work I can do. I do not think too much praise can be said for Peruna."

Those who object to fluid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

SMALL FAVORS

THANKFULLY RECEIVED.

The health report shows ninety-five cases of sore eyes in Owensboro. The election returns, says the Hopkinsville Kentuckian, show about ten times as many sore heads.

That's all right about the sore heads. They will get better or worse, and we'll know soon, just where to figure them. But after the two or three days that some of us bordered on nervous prostration, isn't that 471 plurality for Stanley, small as it is, good for sore eyes?—Shelby Record.

HERE TONIGHT

Estelle Gray and Moritz Lhevinne The Next Number on Big Redpath Series.

Estelle Gray, who has rightly been called "The Violinist of Inspiration," and Moritz Lhevinne, the brilliant Russian pianist, will appear in Hopkinsville at the Tabernacle next Tuesday night Dec. 7.

Miss Gray's musical career began when she, at the age of eight, gave a recital to an audience of 1,500 people, playing a difficult program entirely from memory, at the Alhambra theatre, at San Francisco. At the age of eleven Miss Gray was the youngest to ever receive the offer of the cap and gown from the musical department of the University of the Pacific.

Her violin is one of finest specimens of the old cremonas. It was made in 1715, and is in perfect condition. Miss Gray values her violin at $10,000.

Two years ago when Miss Gray was playing in Berlin, she was given the distinguished honor of being presented with a royal pass to attend all private concerts given under the patronage of the Emperor of Germany.

From Lugano, Switzerland, "The Fantasie Appassionata seemed a greater masterpiece in the hands of the beautiful little mistress of the violin. In Milan they called her 'Stellita (little star), here she is called all that and more. May the Cremona and Estelle violin and Estelle Gray let us hear true music again. Italy produced the violin but it needed the American girl to bring out the real soul of the instrument."

Moritz Lhevinne combines a striking virile personality with his poetical conception dramatic insight into the very soul of music. He has the faculty of enthusing people who never before enjoyed piano solos.

Critics are unanimous on their praise of his legato runs and brilliant active passages. A group of Mr. Lhevinne's own compositions are included in their program. Critics praise them for their distinctive charm.

THE WALTZ

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Billy Kennard opened the door of his dreary little bedroom and held a match to the gas jet before removing his hat. The reflection that sprang into view in the mirror of the bureau showed a face strong and good-looking, but full of trouble-drawn lines.

Failure in one's life work—music it was with Billy—had enough, but to fall in love with a girl as far above you as the planets is just about the limit of human endurance. Tonight he had seen her again, more beautiful than ever.

He looked at himself now in the mirror. "You poor penniless fool," he muttered, "to go crazy over a girl when it's all you can do to live. Who are you to even think of her?"

But in spite of his words, he opened an evening paper to the society column. He watched daily for her name, or rather for her family's name, for he did not know which of the Etheridge girls she was.

An item caught his eye and he read it eagerly. The Etheridges were to be at the Arlington's ball masque on the next night! And he was to play there after the theater!

He finally went to bed and dreamed of columbines and shepherds, queens and flower girls, all with eyes like those of the girl he loved, begging him to play the "Dream" waltz.

The next day was years long, and the play that night dragged insufferably. At last he was free, however, and, with the other members of the orchestra, he put his violin in its case and took the subway to the Arlington.

He was accustomed to the extravagance of the rich, but the magnificence of the ballroom tonight fairly took his breath. "I must put all this nonsense of mine out of my head," he thought. "A girl accustomed to things like this is not for me even to think about." And resolving to put away forever the little waltz, the music he had learned to associate with the girl, he took his place among the musicians on the stage.

Henry of Navarre danced with Mother Goose, Napoleon with Dolly Madison, and a Crusader with Miss Muffet. Clowns and columbines, Turks and fairies, soldiers and milkmaids flew past in a mad whirl, but all were masked and Billy had no idea which maid might be the girl he adored.

In spite of his newly-made resolutions, he watched eagerly during the unmasking, hoping to catch a glimpse of the girl, but she was not to be seen.

A servant handed him an envelope. He read the inclosed note eagerly. Someone had asked him to meet her in the winter garden immediately.

Billy crushed the note into his pocket, made his excuses, and, with the aid of the servant, found the winter garden.

Under a bay tree, looking as demure as a Quakeress, was the smiling Miss Etheridge. She smiled and held out her hand.

"Good evening, Mr. Kennard." Billy was afraid to touch her hand, and more afraid to speak. But it was up to him to say something.

"I am—you are—that is—were you the person who sent for me?" he began awkwardly, after he had taken her hand for an instant. He knew he was bungling dreadfully and reddened. "Yes. Won't you sit down?" She smiled.

"I sent for you," she went on, "to find out why you don't play that beautiful waltz you composed. I spoke to Mr. Richard Amberson, a friend of Mr. Etheridge, about it. He is the music publisher, you know, and he is here tonight waiting to hear your music."

Billy gasped. "You spoke to Richard Amberson for me! Why, if he'd take hold of my work it would make my fortune. How in the world can I thank you, Miss Etheridge?"

"Don't thank me! Besides I'm not Miss Etheridge. I'm Marjorie Watson, at your service," with a jolly little bow. "Poor relative and social secretary rolled into one, and treated better than she deserves by everyone," she added.

Billy's head was swimming. Things were happening too fast for him to comprehend.

His goddess was not only stepping down to earth smiling, but she was holding out promises for the future. "It is all too wonderful to be true, Miss Watson. I can scarcely believe that I am awake. But I'll answer your question about the waltz. I have learned to associate it with you and—" he stopped.

"Well?" demurely. "I cannot tell you part without telling all," he went on quickly, "and I cannot do that—now. You have known me only ten minutes and you wouldn't understand, I'm afraid. I thought you were Miss Etheridge," he added.

Marjorie stood up and laid her hand on his arm. "Perhaps I understand more than you think," she said. "Won't you come tomorrow and tell me all about it?"

"Yes," agreed Billy eagerly. "Then let us go back so you can dig up your waltz from the bottom of the pile and play it for Richard Amberson," Marjorie said mischievously. "I'll hunt him up and tell him to listen."

Peace Prospects Gloomy.

If England should put forth supreme effort in the coming year, and Russia should obtain sufficient equipment for her men, it seems to us that Germany would be brought to the pass of urgently seeking terms of peace well before the end of 1916. But if the Allies are not willing to consider terms that Germany and Austria could entertain as a basis for negotiations, it would further seem likely that the war might be prolonged for still another year, making a total war period of three years. The prospect is a sad and painful one to all who have managed to keep from becoming hardened to the terrible facts and incidents of the struggle. As yet, the fighting governments are sustained by their suffering peoples. There is no urgent demand for peace. The spirit of hostility is so dominant in the warring nations that most of the women are willing to lose their husbands and sons rather than to open their minds to see that the war itself is victimizing the worthy families of all countries, who have no conceivable ground of racial or national enmity.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for December.

Fraudulent Claims.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 6.—Warrants charging Circuit Clerk J. E. McGloire, of Carter county, with making out false witness claims in Commonwealth cases were sworn out before County Judge Hieatt here by G. W. Castle, of the State Inspector and Examiner's office.

Six affidavits, mentioning specific instances were made before the County Judge, but Mr. Goodpaster said fraudulent claims on which $8,363 in interest-bearing warrants had been drawn from the State already have been run down. These warrants were issued to A. J. Stamper, merchant and banker, of Olive Hill, Mr. Goodpaster said.

Mr. Goodpaster said his report, not yet completed, will show that claims have been filed for witnesses who do not exist in cases never docketed and claims included mileage at rate of eight cents the mile from counties as remote as Logan, Larue, Todd, Simpson, Christian, Hart, Trimble, Pike, Green, Bath, Casey and Warren.

Judge Gus Thomas.

"Judge Gus Thomas has assumed his duties as a Judge of the Court of Appeals, and here's an earnest hope that he will prove the equal as a judge of a long line of illustrious and distinguished predecessors."—Cadiz Record.

There is no reason why Judge Thomas should not reflect credit on a district which, as the Record says, has furnished so many distinguished members of the bench. He is young, honest, brainy and capable.

In the early 70's William Lindsay was nominated in a heated contest in a convention at Hopkinsville. He served a term of six years, and then located in Frankfort for the practice of law, and it is said made in one few months after his term expired more than his salary for his term.

The state was then divided into only three appellate districts. In 1878, Judge Thomas Henry Hines, of Bowling Green, was selected over Judge Caswell Bennett, Judge Sweeney and Judge Williams. In those days conventions were held in the different counties on different days, and the candidates made it a point to be at the county seat on the day of the convention. It was apparent before the day of the general convention that Judge Hines had won. Judge Bennett succeeded Judge Hines, was re-elected, and died in office. Governor Brown appointed Judge I. M. Quigley, of Paducah, to fill the vacancy. His short term on the bench was marked by many brilliant decisions. He did not offer for election.

Judge John R. Grace was elected Judge in 1894, the number having by that time been increased to seven. Before he had a chance to show what he could do, he died suddenly in the Capital Hotel at Frankfort. As Circuit Judge for 18 years he had made a most enviable reputation. Governor Bradley appointed Judge J. I. Landes, of Hopkinsville, a Republican, but he only served until the next election, when Judge James D. White, of Bardwell, was chosen in a convention at Hopkinsville to fill out the unexpired term. He was succeeded by Judge Thomas J. Nunn, of Madisonville, who resigned shortly before his term expired on account of ill health, and was succeeded by his son, Judge Clem S. Nunn. In the primary last August, Judge Gus Thomas was the winner, and had no opposition in the general election.—Bowling Green Messenger.

The One Stove That Heats The Whole House!

Moore's Air Tight Heater is the only heater which will heat your entire house—upstairs and down.

It heats like a furnace—by circulation instead of radiation. It sets all the air in circulation throughout the entire space you wish to heat, and heats the air in the farthest room to the same temperature as the air in the same room as the stove. It keeps the floors as warm as a furnace could keep them.

Moore's Air-Tight Heater

The Egg Shaped Dome and Hot Air Firepot consume all the gas and all the carbon there is in the coal, thus overcoming the smoke and soot nuisance and at the same time saving fuel.

The Air Tight Draft Control gives you perfect control of the stove and enables you to hold a fire from 24 to 48 hours.

Dust and dirt are prevented from collecting on the furniture and carpets by a Dust Flue through which they are forced up through the chimney. No other heater on the market has a dust flue.

The Ashpan Apron prevents any ashes from falling on the floor when pan is removed. Clinkers and cinders are entirely done away with.

One polishing keeps it like new for a whole year.

Costs Less Than 1-2 as Much to Run!

Moore's Air Tight Heater burns hard coal or the cheapest kind of slack, and can be run at even less than half the cost of any other heater. One of these heaters will replace two or even three others and give better results than all combined. All parts are surface ground, fit
